[5th September 1928

Hagari and Pennar rivers and onwards to where it will debouch into the Anantapur plain (about 30 miles) this portion is difficult and expensive ; the country to be crossed being hilly.

The crossing of the Pennar river which lies in a deep valley will also be a difficult and expensive business.

On the other hand once water can be got through in large quantities, there appears to be an almost unlimited area of red and mixed soils suitable for irrigation in the Anantapur and Dharmavaram taluks of Anantapur district.

7. Generally speaking provided rock be found at dam site suitable to build a heavy masonry water holding structure on it is considered that the scheme likely to be feasible but expensive. Apart from the nature of the rock, the construction of dam presents many engineering difficulties. The main dam would be approximately 10,000 feet long and subsidiary dams on either side would also be necessary. The cost, it is thus obvious, is likely to be very high. The site cannot compare with the old Mallapuram site near Hospet, any benefits to be gained lie in possibly increased storage and the irrigation of some 50,000 acres in the Western taluks of Bellary.

F. W. Ireland,
Executive Engineer, Tungabhadra Project Dn., Bellary.
